Exceptional Living Centers Continues to Monitor Spread of COVID-19

At Exceptional Living Centers, the health and well-being of our residents and staff are our highest priority amid the COVID-19 (coronavirus) pandemic. We continue to monitor developments and further enhance our policies and procedures as the spread of the coronavirus continues.

We currently have the following guidelines in place at all Exceptional Living Centers communities, following recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC):

- All visitors and non-essential health care personnel are prohibited from entering our facility.
- All employees screened for symptoms of the virus daily upon entry.
- Group activities and communal dining have been suspended.
- Staff dedicated to providing care for the affected or suspected residents are donning all recommended personal protective equipment.
- Residents remain in their room except for medically necessary purposes.
- All residents are being closely monitored for signs and symptoms.

Exceptional Living Centers will continue taking proactive measures to ensure the safety and health of our residents and employees. As we continue to watch this situation evolve, we hope you find comfort in knowing that our community staff and leadership are working diligently to protect and support the health and well-being of those we serve.

A COVID-19 resource webpage, <http://www.exceptionallivingcenters.com/covid-19>, has been established to share the most up-to-date information with you and will be updated regularly.
